7. PROJECT ANALYSIS AND SELECTION

7.1 The projects will be evaluated, according to the research area, by faculty members of the Graduate Program in Philosophy, through the project evaluation form.

7.2 The project will be evaluated by two professors from the Program and the arithmetic media between them will be considered, and the weight attributed for each grade may vary between 0.0 (zero) and 10.0 (ten). The project that obtains an arithmetic media above 7.0 (three) will be classified to the next step.

7.3 The evaluation form contains the following scoring items: 1. Impact on the research area; 2. Theme and title of the research; 3. Indication of the line of research in which the project intends to be developed; 4. Research problem; 5. Introduction to the theme and working hypothesis; 6. Justification; 7. Objectives: (general and specific); 8. Methodology; 9. Schedule; 10. References.

8. INTERVIEW

8.1 The interview is eliminatory.

8.2 The interview examining the defense committee will evaluate the candidate's academic and scientific profile and the research proposal. The following points will be considered in the interview.

- a) Research project and thematic adherence of the candidate's research project to the lines of research and to individual and/or collective research projects developed within the PPGF (15 minute presentation, weight 4\10)

b) Knowledge of the state of the art, the primary and secondary literature, and the objectives that structure the project (weight: 3\10, to be verified by appropriate questions from the interviewers)

c) Academic background duly described in his/her Curricula Lattes (weight: 2 \10, to be verified by means of opportune questions from the interviewers)

d) Time and resources available for research and dedication to the program (weight: 1\10, to be verified through appropriate questions from the interviewers).

8.3 The candidate's performance on his/her research project during the interview will have a weight of 10.0 (ten).

8.4 The interviews will be in-person. For students living outside Curitiba, the interview may be held remotely (by videoconference on a platform and link previously informed to the candidates, with instructions for access, up to 48 hours before each interview). Candidates are responsible for the quality of their hearing and for the internet connection. In case of interruption in the connection, sound or image transmission of the candidate's connection for more than 10 minutes, the Committee may decide to eliminate the candidate or reschedule the interview at another time, if any, on the dates and times scheduled for this stage.

8.5 The composition of the Interview Committee will be previously disclosed by the Program, being formed by three professors from the Line of Research of the selected Project.

9. THE CLASSIFICATION AND RESULT OF THE SELECTION PROCESS

9.1 The Graduate Program in Philosophy Council will recognize and make the selection process results official.

9.2 9.2 The final result of the selection process will consist of the sum of the two scores: Research Project, with weight 10 (ten) and interview, with weight ten (ten). The minimum score for approval, respecting the limit of available places, is 7 (seven).
